Don Pottinger A.V.B. Norman

English Weapons and Warfare, 499-1600 AD

Publisher: Arms and Armour Press

This book is a comprehensive overview of the military history of the period from the end of the Roman Empire in 476 AD to the end of the Middle Ages in 1600 AD. It covers the development of weapons and warfare in Europe and the Near East, focusing on the conflicts that occurred during this time. The book includes detailed descriptions of various types of weapons, such as swords, armor, and siege engines, and their use in battles and campaigns. It also discusses the strategies and tactics used by different armies, including the Byzantine, Ottoman, and Spanish forces. This book is an excellent resource for anyone interested in the history of warfare in medieval Europe.
Explore the history of war and weapons with our timeline of weapons technology. The Golden Age of Islam (600 to 1600 AD) rescues the advances of an English army with a high proportion of archers decimates a French